

Exterior Aesthetics

BY CYNTHIA HERTLIK

ARCHITECT CATHERINE KNIGHT OF KNIGHT ASSOCIATES IN PRINCETON used space over the garage to enlarge a master bedroom, a major objective during this project. Her design worked with the existing roofline so that the new space wouldn't be an obvious addition. By lengthening the lines of the second story, Knight also improved the curb appeal of this house, which is in Princeton.

The awning adds a villa-like feel to the balcony.

The windows and French doors provide a dramatic entry to the new balcony while bringing sunlight into the bedroom.

Photo by William Taylor

A bluestone walkway provides a transition between the house and the driveway and garden.

The balcony gradually terminates the portion of the house that's over the garage, providing a transition for the end of the structure.

The arbor on the side of the garage allows for climbing plants that will soften the walls as they grow.